

Since school has closed and the bright invigorating days of Spring at hand, the small boy is seen lingering on the street and on vacant lots in his pristine glory. "Idleness is the devil's work shop" and if these aforesaid boys could be kept employed at some instructive work or innocent amusement, it would save them from becoming hoodlums and afterwards, toughs.

"Hoquarton" Harry has shifted his physical constituency from this his recent abode. God speed him in his efforts to get across the mountains and out of the county. If a few more chronic drunks would follow his example, it would greatly enhance the peace and quietude of the community. Our Sheriff should give them a chance to vacate and if that does no good, enforce the law against them to its full extent.
